Endourology Course Hands-on: State of the Art Looking at the future

Scientific Director
Emanuele Caldarera

The Course is intended for residents in their final years of residency and provides an opportunity for them to familiarize themselves with the most commonly used endoscopic techniques on the upper urinary tract.

Many congenital and acquired urologic diseases, including common conditions like nephrolithiasis, can be treated effectively with minimally invasive techniques that have significant benefits for patients in terms of postoperative pain and reductions of hospitalization time.

In addition to attending a number of readings on Topics of interest regarding the medical and surgical treatment of upper tract stones, participants will have the opportunity to perform practical tests with a latest generation simulator and enter the operating room to view surgeries performed by course instructors.

We therefore believe the event will improve the professional knowledge and skills of all participants
